THE EDITORS

Wil Hout is Professor of Governance and International Political Economy at the International Institute of Social Studies, Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Netherlands. His research interests relate to international political economy, regionalism, development policies and issues of governance and development in Suriname and Uganda. He has published in journals such as Critical Asian Studies, Development and Change, the European Journal of International Relations, the Journal of Development Studies, Review of African Political Economy and Third World Quarterly. His latest book, co-authored with M.A. Mohamed Salih, is A Political Economy of African Regionalisms (Edward Elgar, 2019).

Jane Hutchison is Adjunct Associate Professor in Politics and International Studies at Murdoch University, Western Australia. As a political economist, she has research interests in poor people's politics, gender and development, and development effectiveness in Southeast Asia. She was for ten years a member of the Oxfam Australia Board and was two years on the Oxfam International Board of Supervisors.

CONTRIBUTORS

Karin Arts is a Full Professor of International Law and Development at the International Institute of Social Studies in The Hague (part of Erasmus University Rotterdam). The right to development, human rights-based approaches to (sustainable) development issues, and more in particular child rights-based approaches, are central in her current academic work. She is a contributor to the annual KidsRights Index and vice-chair of the supervisory board of the Dutch National UNICEF Committee.

Kees Biekart is Associate Professor of Political Sociology at the International Institute of Social Studies (ISS), Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Netherlands. His expertise is in social movements, NGOs, civil society, and civic-driven change. His PhD research examined the role of European NGOs in promoting peace and democracy in Central America. His recent research focuses on civic agency in changing civic spaces. Together with Alan Fowler, he is currently preparing A Research Agenda for Civil Society (Edward Elgar, forthcoming).

Toby Carroll is Associate Professor in the Department of Asian and International Studies, City University of Hong Kong. He works on the political economy of development. He has published in leading journals such as Journal of Contemporary Asia, Globalizations, Development and Change, and Antipode. His most recent edited volume, The Political Economy of Southeast Asia: Politics and Uneven Development under Hyperglobalisation, was co-edited with Shahar Hameiri and Lee Jones.

Shabbir Cheema was formerly a senior fellow of Harvard Kennedy School, director of UNDP's democratic governance division and director of the East-West Center's Asian governance and democracy initiative. He has taught at the Science University of Malaysia, the University of Hawaii and New York University. His books include: Governance for Urban Services (Springer 2020), The Evolution of Development Thinking (co-authored with William Ascher, Gary Brewer and Jay Heffron, Palgrave Macmillan 2016), Innovations in Governance Series (UNU 2010), and Building Democratic Institutions (Lynne Rienner 2005).

Renske Doorenspleet is Associate Professor in the Department of Politics and International Studies, Warwick University, United Kingdom. She has published in journals such as World Politics, Democratization, Acta Politica, the International Political Science Review, Ethnopolitics, Government and Opposition and the European Journal of Political Research. She edited two books on political parties in Africa and wrote two monographs on the explanations and effects of democracy in global perspective. Her most recent academic monograph is Rethinking the Value of Democracy (Palgrave Macmillan, 2019).

Francesca Farrington is an Affiliated Lecturer and PhD Candidate at the Faculty of Law, University of Cambridge. She also collaborates with the Rule of Law and Economic Development (ROLED) research group at McGill University. Her research interests include law and economics, international development, and corporate accountability. In particular, she is interested in exploring the contribution that legal theory can make to international development discourse. She has recently published articles in the Business and Human Rights Journal and the Hibernian Law Journal.

Marin Ferry is an Assistant Professor at the University Gustave Eiffel (France), member of the research unit ERUDITE, and a research affiliate at the University Paris Dauphine (LEDA/DIAL). His research focuses on the development impacts of various forms of financing for development, with a special focus on debt relief initiatives for low-income countries.

Augustin Kwasi Fosu is Professor (ISSER), University of Ghana; Distinguished Visiting Professor (CBE), University of Johannesburg; Extraordinary Professor (FEMS), University of Pretoria; and Research Associate (CSAE), University of Oxford. Previously, he was Deputy Director of UNU-WIDER in Helsinki, Senior Policy Advisor/Chief Economist at the United Nations Economic Commission for Africa in Addis Ababa, and Director of Research at the African Economic Research

Consortium in Nairobi. He has served on numerous editorial boards of journals, including Journal of African Economies, Journal of Development Studies, Oxford Development Studies, World Bank Economic Review, and World Development. He has published widely, including many papers on governance and institutions.

Dede Woade Gafa specializes in development economics. She is a researcher with the African Economic Research Consortium and Poverty Reduction, Equity and Growth networks. She worked recently as a research fellow at the University of Lomé, Togo. She obtained her PhD degree in development economics from the University of Ghana, and served as a PhD intern at UNU-WIDER, Helsinki. Her research interests include economic inequality, opportunity distribution, and poverty alleviation.

Joyeeta Gupta was co-chair of UNEP's Global Environment Outlook-6 (2016-2019), published by Cambridge University Press, which was presented to governments participating in the United Nations Environment Assembly in 2019, and won the Association of American Publishers PROSE award for Environmental Science. She is presently co-chair of the Earth Commission (2019-2021), set up by Future Earth, together with Johan Rockström and Dahe Qin. She is Professor of Environment and Development in the Global South at the Amsterdam Institute for Social Science Research of the University of Amsterdam and IHE Delft Institute for Water Education. She is also the Faculty Professor on Sustainability (2019-2024). She has recently obtained an European Research Council Advanced Grant for her research on climate change and fossil fuels.

Shahar Hameiri is Professor of International Politics in the School of Political Science and International Studies, University of Queensland. His research focuses on security, development and aid, governance, political geography and international relations. His most recent book, co-authored with Lee Jones, is Fractured China: How State Transformation is Shaping China's Rise (Cambridge University Press, 2021).

Pascale Hatcher is Senior Lecturer in the Department of Political Science and International Relations at the University of Canterbury, New Zealand. She works on the political economy of mining in the Asia-Pacific region with a specific interest on how transnational norms are being transplanted and contested in local arenas. Her most recent publication is 'Searching for New Political Spaces: Negotiating Citizenship and Transnational Identities on Mongolia's Mining Frontier' (with Jennifer Lander), Journal of Contemporary Asia (2022).

Caroline Hughes is Rev Theodore M. Hesburgh CSC Professor of Peace Studies at the Kroc Institute for International Peace Studies, at the University of Notre Dame in the United States. Her research focuses on the political economy of peacebuilding policy and practice, with a particular focus on Southeast Asia. She has published in journals such as Journal of Peace Research, International Studies Quarterly and Development and Change. Her books include International Intervention and Local Politics (with Shahar Hameiri and Fabio Scarpello, Cambridge University Press, 2017), The Politics of Accountability in Southeast Asia (with Garry Rodan, Oxford University Press, 2014) and Dependent Communities: Aid and Politics in Cambodia and East Timor (Cornell SEAP, 2009).

Rosalba Icaza is Professor in Global Politics, Feminisms and Decoloniality at the International Institute of Social Studies (ISS), Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Netherlands. Her research focuses on epistemic justice in development studies and transborder forms of resistance to multiple intermeshed oppressions along lines of gender, race/ethnicity, class, age/generation, sexualities, and body capacities. Her article “Decolonial Feminism and Global Politics: Border Thinking and Vulnerability as a Knowing Otherwise”, was reprinted in Victoria Browne, Jason Danely and Doerthe Rosenow (eds), Vulnerability and the Politics of Care: Transdisciplinary Dialogues (Oxford University Press, 2021).

Darryl S.L. Jarvis is Professor in the College of Public Policy at Hamad Bin Khalifa University in Doha, Qatar. His research interests focus on comparative political economy and comparative public policy, including the politics of regulation, marketisation and development in Asia. His recent publications include Convergence and Diversity in the Governance of Higher Education: Comparative Perspectives, Cambridge University Press (with Giliberto Capano); and Asia After the Developmental State: Disembedding Autonomy, Cambridge University Press (with Toby Carroll).

Lee Jones is Professor of Political Economy and International Relations at Queen Mary University of London. His research focuses on state transformation, governance, security and political economy. His latest book, co-authored with Shahar Hameiri, is Fractured China: How State Transformation is Shaping China's Rise (Cambridge University Press, 2021).

Karim Knio is Associate Professor in Political Economy and Governance at the International Institute of Social Studies, Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Netherlands. His research focuses on the intersection between international political economy, governance and public policy with a particular interest in the literatures on varieties of capitalism, variegated neoliberalisations, institutional analysis, politics of crisis management and EU Mediterranean policies. He is the author of The European Union's Mediterranean Policy: Model or Muddle? A New Institutional Perspective (Palgrave Macmillan, 2013), The South China Sea and Asian Regionalism (with Thanh-Dam Truong, Springer, 2016) and the co-editor of The Pedagogy of Economic, Political and Social Crises: Dynamics, Construals, and Lessons (with Bob Jessop, Routledge, 2019).

Heather Marquette is Professor of Development Politics and Senior Research Fellow (Governance and Conflict) at the UK's Foreign, Commonwealth and Development Office. She is also the director of the Serious Organised Crime and Anti-Corruption Evidence (SOC ACE) research programme. Her research has been funded by the British Academy/Global Challenges Research Fund, DFID, DFAT and the EU, and focuses on corruption and anti-corruption interventions, development politics, aid and foreign policy and transnational organised crime. She is a member of the Global Initiative Against Transnational Organised Crime's Expert Network and Transparency International's Defence and Security advisory group.

Daphina Misiedjan is an Assistant Professor in Human rights and the Environment at the International Institute of Social Studies in The Hague (part of Erasmus University Rotterdam). She specializes in human rights and environmental justice and focuses on issues such as access to water in Suriname and Yemen, and climate justice within the Kingdom of the Netherlands. She published the book Towards a Sustainable Human Right to Water (Intersentia, 2019) and is an expert in the UN Harmony with Nature program.

Nadia Molenaers is Professor of International Cooperation and Development at the Institute of Development Policy of the University of Antwerp, Belgium. Her research focuses on two main themes: she studies whether and how international developments and paradigm shifts influence donor policies and practices and she analyses how donors try to push and pull recipient countries to adapt to or adopt certain policies and governance reforms.

Bronwen Morgan is Professor of Law in the Faculty of Law and Justice, UNSW Sydney, Australia. She previously taught at the Universities of Bristol and Oxford. Her books include The Rise of the Regulatory State of the South: Infrastructure and Development in Emerging Economies (with Navroz Dubash, Cambridge, 2013), An Introduction to Law and Regulation (with Karen Yeung, Cambridge, 2007) and Water on Tap: Rights and Regulation in the Transnational Governance of Urban Water Services (Cambridge, 2011). Her current research explores pathways towards regenerative economies, with a particular focus on energy, food, water and new kinds of lawyers.

Jewellord (Jojo) Nem Singh is Senior Lecturer of International Development at the International Institute of Social Studies, Erasmus University Rotterdam, The Netherlands. He is currently leading the research programme Green Industrial Policy in the Age of Rare Metals, funded through a European Research Council (ERC) Starting Grant. He has published in the fields of international political economy, development and resource governance and is the author of Business of the State: Why State Ownership Matters for Resource Governance. He has edited special issues on designing and negotiating industrial policy (Third World Quarterly, forthcoming), resource governance and norm domestication in the developing world (Environmental Policy and Governance, 2020) and developmental states beyond East Asia (Third World Quarterly, 2018).

Caryn Peiffer is Senior Lecturer in International Governance and Public Policy at the School for Policy Studies at the University of Bristol. Her research has largely focused on the causes and consequences of corruption, as well as the (unintended) impacts of anticorruption interventions. Her research has been funded by the British Academy/Global Challenges Research Fund, DFID, DFAT and the EU, and she regularly advises Transparency International.

Klaudia Prodani is a researcher at the University of Amsterdam's (UvA) Faculty of Social and Behavioural Sciences, where she is involved in supporting the Earth Commission in reconciling planetary boundaries with justice. Her research focuses on drawing connections between the disciplines of political economy, political philosophy, and philosophy of science.

Nandini Ramanujam is a Full Professor (Professional) at the Faculty of Law, McGill University. She is the Co-Director and Director of Programs of the Centre for Human Rights and Legal Pluralism. Her research and teaching interests include Law and Development, Institutions and Governance, Economic Justice, Food Security and Food Safety, the role of civil society and the Fourth Estate (Media) in promotion of the rule of law, as well as the exploration of interconnections between field based human rights work and theoretical discourses.

Etienne Roy Grégoire is an Assistant Professor in Political Science at the Université du Québec à Chicoutimi (UQAC) and a member of the Centre for Indigenous Conservation and Development Alternatives (CICADA). His research focuses on the global extractive sector as a vector of normative innovations and political transformations. He obtained a PhD in political science from the University of Ottawa in 2019. His work has been published in Extractive Industries and Society, the Canadian Journal of Development Studies and the Canadian Journal of Law and Society.

Lian Sinclair is Lecturer in Politics at Murdoch University, Australia. Her research centres on political economies of extractive industries, social conflict, and global governance. Her PhD (Murdoch University, 2020) concerned the participation and resistance of Indonesian mining communities, some of the gendered dimensions of which are published in ‘Beyond Victimisation: Gendered Legacies of Mining, Participation, and Resistance’, The Extractive Industries and Society, 2021.

Haley J. Swedlund is an Associate Professor of International Relations in the Department of Political Science, Centre for International Conflict Analysis and Management (CICAM) at Radboud University in the Netherlands. Her research focuses on international actors in the Global South. She is the author of The Development Dance: How Donors and Recipients Negotiate Foreign Aid (Cornell University Press, 2017) and has published on her research in journals such as African Affairs, Review of International Political Economy, International Affairs, and the European Journal of International Relations.

Paulos C. Tsegaw is an Assistant Professor of Economics at Virginia State University, USA. He holds a PhD from the International Institute of Social Studies, Erasmus University Rotterdam in 2007. His research interests focus on governance, human development, and intergovernmental fiscal relations in Africa. A recent publication is ‘The Nexus Between Good Governance Indicators and Human Development Index in Africa: An Econometric Analysis’, Journal of Public Administration and Governance, vol. 10, no. 2 (2020).

Christian von Soest is a Lead Research Fellow and Head of the Peace and Security Research Programme at the German Institute for Global and Area Studies (GIGA) in Hamburg, Germany. He is also a member of the GIGA Office Berlin. In his research, he focuses on governance issues, political legitimacy, authoritarian politics, and international interventions and sanctions. His regional focus is on sub-Saharan Africa. He has published in, inter alia, Democratization, the European Journal of Political Research, the European Political Science Review, International Studies Quarterly, the Journal of Modern African Studies and the Journal of Peace Research.

David Williams is Professor of International Politics and Head of School in the School of Politics and International Relations, Queen Mary University London. His research focusses on liberalism, development and North-South Relations, past and present. His most recent book is Progress, Pluralism and Politics: Liberalism and Colonialism, Past and Present (McGill-Queen’s University Press, 2020).

Preface

The contributions to this Handbook on Governance and Development aim to present an overview of current scholarship in the burgeoning field of governance and development. The chapters in this volume reflect the multidisciplinary nature of work in the area and show that the attention to governance and development draws on research on all major regions in the world.

The Handbook was conceived and commissioned in early 2019, and most of the work was done after the onset of the COVID-19 pandemic. The pandemic has had a clear impact on the volume, since a number of authors had to withdraw from the project because of the personal or professional implications they faced amidst the world-wide health crisis. Of the original 30 contributions that had been contracted, 22 were finally included in the Handbook.

As editors we are grateful to Edward Elgar Publishing for the suggestion to include this volume in the Elgar Handbook Series. We would like to thank Daniel Mather for his support and advice throughout the editing process.
